

EASP Preconference: Relationships & Health

4th of July, Granada

9.30-9.55 Registration & Coffee

9.55-10.00 Welcome

10.00-10.45 Johan Karremans (Radboud University, the Netherlands)
“Does relationship science need mindfulness?”

10.45-11.30 Margaret Clark (Yale University, USA)
“Ways in which low self-esteem undermines relationships (and probably health)”

11.30-11.50 COFFEE BREAK

11.50-12.35 Guy Bodenmann (University of Zurich, Switzerland)
“Dyadic coping: Its background and meaning for relationship functioning”

12.35-13.15 Data Blitz

13.15-14.30 LUNCH BREAK

14.30-15.15 Lesley Verhofstadt (Ghent University, Belgium)
“Are Empathic Spouses More Supportive? An Overview of Multi-Method Evidence”

15.15-16.00 Rich Slatcher (Wayne State University, USA)
“A social psychological perspective on the links between close relationships and health”

16.00-17.00 DRINKS & FAREWELL

Data Blitz

Laura Sels (University of Leuven): “Emotional interdependence in close relationships”

Alexander Kirchner (University of Leuven): “Cultural differences in self-reported affect, relationship satisfaction and wellbeing during conflict in close relationships”

Melissa Vink (Utrecht University): “Do modern couples face relationship struggles?”

Fernando Molero (National Distance Education University, Madrid): “Attachment insecurities, relationship satisfaction and subjective well-being from a dyadic perspective”

Gesa Kappen (Radboud University Nijmegen): “Movement towards ideal self moderates the negative effects of perceived regulation by romantic partners on relationship satisfaction”

Loes Meeussen (University of Leuven): “Looking for a family man: Male stereotypes do not hold in relationships”

Mariko Visserman (VU University Amsterdam): “It’s the motive that counts: Perceived sacrifice motives and gratitude in romantic relationships”